

Eye-opening technology with expert assistance

It's the New Year and there's no better time to have your eyes tested, don a chic new pair of glasses, sunglasses or even trial a pair of contact lenses.

The Waurm Ponds OPSM optical team have recently added cutting-edge technologies to their offering.

Digital Retinal Scanning records an intricately detailed digital image of the eye whilst their new Rebound Tonometry technology ensures that no longer are annoying drops or sudden air puffs needed to check your eye pressure.

These advancements allow for more thorough monitoring for long term subtle changes such as glaucoma or macular degeneration, according to optometrist Rowan Prendergast.

"Whether you're looking for the latest eye fashion from world-leading brands, or just a seasonal update, we have a frame to suit everyone," Rowan said.

"Come in store and see our wide range of glasses and sunglasses. Our dedicated team can also advise you on the right frames for your look and lifestyle needs.

"As a contact lens wearer and local surfer, I provide free contact lens trials and personalised fittings for those who live an active outdoor lifestyle.

"Contact lenses are a great alternative to glasses. We know good vision makes life easier and that you need different solutions for different days.

"It's our job to help you find those solutions because eyes are special, delicate things that need to be cherished and well cared for.

"We give personal recommendations when needed and insightful advice when necessary.

We want to know the people behind the eyes by getting to know what matters most to our customers.

"Seeing clearly is a precious gift we should never take for granted. We are driven by what we love. And we love to help people see."
